The galleries—the City Hall Lobby Gallery and the Anne Focke Gallery—focus on artworks that reflect the broad diversity of Seattle's communities and showcase the work of regional artists, nonprofit organizations and community groups. Past exhibitions have highlighted arts education, climate change and homelessness. Group shows have featured works by Seattle print and quilt artists, Native American youth, and Latino and African-American artists.

Exhibitions should reflect the diversity of Seattle's communities and emphasize the people, places and character of Seattle. Exhibition proposals from arts and community-based organizations are welcome. Exhibitions are displayed for six to eight weeks. Most shows span the City Hall Lobby Gallery and Anne Focke Gallery.

Individual artists are not eligible to apply unless they are sponsored by an arts or community organization and the subject of their artwork has great significance to Seattle. Individual artists may also apply as part of a group show.

The galleries at City Hall are equipped to display two-dimensional artworks and together can accommodate up to about 50 artworks. Three-dimensional pieces will only be considered if applicants furnish all necessary display cases. Video and media works will not be accepted.

The City Hall Lobby Gallery features eight, double-sided, metal, peg-board panels that are 6 feet tall and 4 feet wide. The Anne Focke Gallery features a 120-foot long display wall (with professional hanging system) and is located on the L2 level of City Hall.

A selection panel of city employees administered by the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs will review the applications and select exhibitions.

The application deadline is 11 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 5. The exhibition cycle will begin in mid-April and run through March 2011. All applications must be submitted digitally. A link to the online application is available at www.seattle.gov/arts. For more information, contact Elly Beerman at (206) 684-3930 or eleanor.beerman@seattle.gov.

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs promotes the value of arts and culture in communities throughout Seattle. The 16-member Seattle Arts Commission, citizen volunteers appointed by the mayor and City Council, supports the city agency.

Hear what his clients have to Say:

To Whom It May Concern:

After surveying the Ravenna District by driving around looking at homes for sale and the ones that had not been sold, I pondered for a long time which real estate company to contact regarding a house estate sale in this area. There were so many companies represented.

Finally, I decided to contact Windermere. There was a brochure with Roger Turner's name on it and I called him. He agreed to come over to the house and was extremely prompt. He had with him a marketing analysis for this address and was knowledgeable of the appraisal values of the homes in the Ravenna area. I found him to be extremely polite, and I liked his mannerism and he seemed very personable, cooperative and informative. He did not display an attitude of being a salesman who "knew it all."

After explaining the situation of the estate sale, I found out he had recently handled an estate sale in his own immediate family. While talking with him I felt assured that he had the salesmanship, capability and suggestions for marketing the home.

During our transaction, when a maintenance problem arose, Roger was able to provide me with names of reliable individuals such as, removing carpeting, dump hauling, etc. which was very helpful.

From my experience in marketing for a long time, I would recommend him very highly to anyone who is looking for a good salesman and representative in handling their real estate sale of home and property.

Leigh Bennett, our attorney; Arch Mallinson, co-administrator and myself were completely amazed at the number of offers from prospective buyers and how quickly the house was sold at the asking price. The paper work for the sale was processed very smoothly.

Thank you, Roger, for your part in making this possible. I wish to congratulate you on the upcoming addition to your family and I wish you success in the real estate business. Hang in there.

Sincerely,
Margaret Brown

FESTIVALS AND EVENTS COLOR THE CHARACTER OF SEATTLE'S NEIGHBORHOODS

SEATTLE — Festivals and events color the character of Seattle's neighborhoods. Community groups planning a neighborhood arts or cultural event in 2010 can apply for funding through the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs' Neighborhood & Community Arts program.

The funding program helps Seattle's neighborhood art councils and community-based groups produce festivals and events that enhance the visibility of neighborhoods, promote cultural participation, celebrate diversity and build community through arts and culture.

Neighborhood arts councils and community-based groups that have been in existence for at least one year may seek annual support for a recurring festival or event that has a significant arts and cultural component, is open to the public and takes place in Seattle. Applicants are not required to have 501(c) (3) tax-exempt status.

Funded organizations each receive $1,200 to support direct project expenses, including artist fees, marketing and promotional fees, venue and equipment rentals or other production-related expenses. Funds may not be used for fundraising or organizational administrative expenses. Link to the online application at www.seattle.gov/arts.

In 2009, the funding program provided $1,200 each to 37 organizations to support annual public festivals and events.

utilities, parks, police, fire and many other city departments. "Citylink Seattle takes our city beyond traditional news releases and printed newsletters to delivering faster, more immediate information that keeps you in touch with your city in one convenient place," said Mayor Greg Nickels. Citylink Seattle offers residents the latest information, such as police and fire activities, events at parks and the Seattle Center, and up-to-the-minute news about traffic and utilities. Eleven city departments are part of the initial launch, each creating news feeds and displaying the latest headlines on their department homepages. All the information from those individual pages is collected and fed immediately into the Citylink Seattle Web site (www.citylink.seattle.gov), where residents can view updates from across the city.

The 11 newsfeeds are:

- Power Lines: News and updates from Seattle City Light
- SPD blotter: News and updates from the Seattle Police Department
- On the Move: Advisories from the Seattle Department of Transportation
- At Your Service: Seattle Public Utilities news and events
- Fire Line: News and updates from the Seattle Fire Department
- Building Connections: Seattle Department of Planning and Development news
- Art Beat: Seattle Arts and Cultural Affairs news and events
- Center Spotlight: Seattle Center news and events
- The Scoop: Seattle Animal Shelter news and events
- Parkways: Seattle Parks and Recreation news and events
- Bottom Line: News and updates from Seattle's Office of Economic Development

Residents can also sign up for RSS feeds and get information sent directly to their phones or mobile devices. In addition, residents can subscribe to real-time information through Twitter and be alerted to the latest Citylink Seattle news from several departments, including Seattle Police (twitter.com/seattlepd), Fire (twitter.com/seattlefire), City Light (twitter.com/seacitylight) and the Seattle Department of Transportation (twitter.com/seattledot).

MAYOR'S BUDGET: PRUDENT AND COMPASSIONATE

SEATTLE – Mayor Greg Nickels today presented his 2010 proposed budget to the City Council. This is his eighth and final proposed budget and reflects the four priorities he established when he took office: public safety, transportation, strong families and healthy communities, and jobs and opportunities for all.

Despite a global economic crisis that resulted in lower revenues from many of the city's funding sources, Nickels' budget adds new patrol officers, continues work on fixing the Mercer Corridor, and spends more on human services than all other cities in Washington combined.

"The good news is that Seattle has not and will not suffer draconian cuts to basic services," said Nickels in his annual budget speech in Council Chambers. "We are strong despite the storm. And I promise you: Seattle will lead the nation to a cleaner, more progressive, more prosperous future."

The latest revenue forecasts project a $72 million revenue shortfall in the general fund's 2009-2010 biennial budget, the result of lower revenue, particularly sales and business taxes. To balance the budget, Nickels proposed cuts of roughly 4.4 percent from the endorsed 2010 budget, or about $41 million.

The proposed budget eliminates approximately 310 positions citywide, and reduces the number of city vehicles. Last month, members of 14 Coalition of City Unions agreed to 10-day unpaid furloughs for 2010, saving an estimated $6.5 million from the General Fund.

The city will also use $25.4 million from the Rainy Day Fund, leaving about $5 million for the future.

Nickels' budget does not raise taxes. In fact, Nickels and two councilmembers proposed repealing the employee hours tax, now pending before Council. Nickels also approved legislation to raise the B&O tax threshold to $100,000 starting in 2010.

The proposed budget assumes an 8.8 percent City Light rate increase on Jan. 1, 2010, which is included in legislation being submitted to Council. The rate increase is driven by lower wholesale energy sales, increasing costs (such as federal licensing), and general inflation. To reduce the size of the increase, Nickels eliminated 68 full-time equivalent City Light positions.

If adopted, City Light's rates would still be lower than in 2002, when Nickels took office. And City Light has dramatically improved its financial situation since the West Coast power crisis in 2000 and 2001:

2002	2008
Rates: 6.30 cents per kWh	Rates: 5.64 cents per kWh
Bond rating: A+ (S & P)	Bond rating: AA- (S & P)
Net Income: -$1.9 million	Net Income: $131.6 million
Metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions offset: 0	Metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions offset: 64,345

Despite budget reductions, City Light is proposing to continue expansion of its conservation programs in 2010. In fact, simple conservation measures can offset the rate increase for many households. For example, an average residential customer can offset the increase by replacing 10 incandescent lights with high-efficiency bulbs or other conservation measures.

Other budget highlights include:

- Adds 20 new patrol officers in 2010, keeping Seattle on track with Nickels' plan to have 154 new officers on the streets by 2012.
- With funding from the voter-approved Fire Facilities and Emergency Response Levy and other city funds, the Fleets and Facilities Department will continue to replace and remodel almost all of Seattle's fire stations. In the 2010 Proposed Budget, nine neighborhood stations will be under construction in 2010 and land will be purchased for a new site for Fire Station 20. Also in 2010, the "Chief Seattle" fireboat will be refitted.
- Continued work on the Alaskan Way Seawall, some utility work, and additional planning to support the state's replacement of the Alaskan Way Viaduct with a deep-bore tunnel.
- Funding for the Mercer Corridor – East Phase project and also the Mercer Corridor – West Phase project that connects Mercer Street to the north end of the proposed deep-bore tunnel and improves traffic flow between Elliott Avenue West and Interstate 5.
- Continued funding for the Seattle Youth Violence Prevention Initiative to provide high-risk teens a better future.

The City Council is expected to adopt a 2010 budget by the end of November.

"We will stay true to the things that are important: we will continue to focus on public safety, help our most vulnerable, solve transportation challenges and prepare to take back our waterfront," said Nickels. "With this budget, we will make a positive difference in people's lives, just as we have for eight years."
