Pledge to Recycle for Chance to Win an Alaskan Cruise

On November 15, you could celebrate the birthdays of celebrities such as Georgia O'Keeffe, Ed Asner, Petula Clark or Sam Waterston. You could commemorate the adoption of the Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union by the second Continental Congress. Or you could take part in America Recycles Day (ARD).

Since 1977, November 15th has been an annual national awareness event to promote the social, environmental, and economic benefits of buying recycled and recycling. Last year, residents in every state participated in America Recycles Day and pledged to recycle.

The campaign is conducted by a national all-volunteer non-profit organization whose goal is to encourage Americans to recycle and buy recycled products.

To promote participation, the organizers are offering prizes to adults and youth who pledge to step up their recycling efforts in the coming year "in some way, large or small." One lucky adult who signs the pledge can win an all-expenses paid seven night Alaskan cruise for two, while five youngsters will each win a recycled aluminum content 24-speed bicycle.

Around half the people in the U.S. are now served by curbside collection programs, according to ARD. These programs, along with drop-off and buy-back centers, now help us divert about 30% of the nation's solid waste stream away from landfills. The Environmental Protection Agency reports considerable progress in the country's recycling efforts (see box).

Six organizations founded America Recycles Day. They are Environmental Defense, Environmental Protection Agency, Office of the Federal Environmental Executive, National Recycling Coalition, Recycling Alliance of Texas and Solid Waste Association of North America.

Since inception, the campaign has attracted a number of supporters and sponsors, including American Beverage Association, Waste Management/Recycle America and United States Conference of Mayors.

To find out more about ways to participate in America Recycles Day visit <http://www.americarecyclesday.org>.

Recycling Facts and Figures

In 1999, recycling and composting activities prevented about 64 million tons of material from ending up in landfills and incinerators. Today, this country recycles 28 percent of its waste, a rate that has almost doubled during the past 15 years.

While recycling has grown in general, recycling of specific materials has grown even more drastically: 42 percent of all paper, 40 percent of all plastic soft drink bottles, 55 percent of all aluminum beer and soft drink cans, 57 percent of all steel packaging, and 52 percent of all major appliances are now recycled.

Twenty years ago, only one curbside recycling program existed in the United States, which collected several materials at the curb. By 1998, 9,000 curbside programs and 12,000 recyclable drop-off centers had sprouted up across the nation. As of 1999, 480 materials recovery facilities had been established to process the collected materials.

Nickels' proposed 2007-2008 budget invests wisely in city's future

Mayor Greg Nickels today proposed a 2007-2008 budget that builds on the strong economic growth and good financial management during the last few years and invests wisely in expanding basic services. The proposed budget includes new investments in transportation, police and firefighters, combating global warming and protecting the environment, ending homelessness and building strong neighborhoods. Transportation is a critical issue facing Seattle. The mayor's proposed budget continues current transportation maintenance efforts and adds significant funding under Bridging the Gap, a transportation maintenance and development program that includes a property tax levy lid lift, a commercial parking tax, and a business transportation tax. The property tax measure is proposed for the November ballot. If approved by voters, approximately $40 million and $52 million will be generated by the three revenue sources for transportation investments in 2007 and 2008, respectively.

In addition, Nickels' proposed budget:

- Invests about $18.5 million to create a three-part Environmental Action Agenda:
- $14.3 million to reduce greenhouse gas emissions; $3 million to expand and maintain Seattle's tree cover; and $1.2 million to improve the city's streams and shorelines.
- Includes $3 million to expand Housing First, a strategy offering housing for the homeless with support services to deal with additional challenges of drug or alcohol abuse and mental-health issues. This funding is part of the city's commitment to the 10-Year Plan to End Homelessness. The proposed budget also includes money to continue the current number of shelter beds.
- Includes about $2.5 million for a downtown parks initiative of maintenance and program expansions, which includes hiring five new park rangers to improve security and service.
- Provides an additional $500,000 to expand the Seattle Public Library's collections budget. Overall the Seattle Public Library budget reflects $4 million in additional resources to operate new and expanded facilities, additional hours and added collections to better serve Seattle Public Library patrons.
- Includes approximately $800,000 to expand apprenticeship opportunities at City Light, Seattle Public Utilities, and the Fleets and Facilities Department.
- Adds six patrol positions in 2007 at a cost of about $600,000. Includes $585,000 to put combined camera and mobile data computers in all Police Department patrol vehicles.

The revenue estimates in the proposed 2007-2008 budget reflect an expected slowdown in the national and regional economies over the next few years, in response to higher interest rates, a slumping housing market, higher energy prices and other issues.

The proposed general fund budget - which pays for services typically associated with city government, such as police, fire, parks and libraries - is $807 million for 2007 and $813 million for 2008. The total proposed budget (including utilities) for 2007 is $3.3 billion and $3.4 billion for 2008.

Fall Offers New Ways To Be Good Stewards

Every season offers new opportunities for homeowners and businesses to reduce, reuse and recycle.

Here are tips from the City of Tacoma on how to tidy up your yard and garden and prepare your home for cooler temperatures with minimum impact on the environment.

- To reuse your yard and garden waste, compost it at home. Compost is a rich, organic soil conditioner for your lawn and garden. (Editor's note: For more information on "stewardship gardening," including how-to tips and helpful links, visit: <http://gardening.wsu.edu/stewardship/compost/compost.htm>)
- Cool, dry fall days are a great time to paint both the interior and exterior of your home. If you have paint left over from your project, give it to neighbors or a charity. Otherwise, make sure you dispose of unwanted paint properly. When improperly disposed, paint can pollute surface water and groundwater, threatening human health and wildlife.
- When stocking up on cold-weather gear, buy recycled-content items such as fleece clothing and blankets made from recycled bottles. Buying recycled-content products "closes the loop" and encourages companies to make more items with recycled materials. As the demand for recycled-content products increases, so does the availability.
- When it's time to replace your insulation, buy insulation made from recycled paper, glass, and other recovered materials.
- Before winter weather sets in, remove screens from windows and doors and put up storm windows. Strong winds, heavy rains, and extreme cold can all damage your screens and ordinary windows, sending them to landfills before their time.
- Check caulking around windows and do touch ups to conserve energy and natural resources.
- Clean and properly store tools, toys and outdoor furniture to protect them from damage. This can extend their life, saving you money, while saving space at landfills.
- When performing routine maintenance on your car, properly dispose of used motor oil, coolants and batteries at hazardous waste facilities.

Income Housing Costs Census Bureau Statistics

Homeowners in every state but one spent more of their incomes on housing costs last year than at the start of the decade, according to the Census Bureau.

Those in Alaska spent the same. Nationwide, homeowners spent nearly 21 percent of their incomes on housing costs last year, up from just under 19 percent in 1999. Housing costs are defined as mortgage payments, taxes, insurance and utilities. Housing analysts blamed surging home prices, higher interest rates and lower incomes for hurting affordability. America's homeownership rate is at a near record of 68.7 percent.

The government says housing costs are excessive if they top 30 percent of household income. Nationally, 34.5 percent of homeowners with a mortgage had housing costs that topped that benchmark in 2005, an increase from 26.7 percent in 1999. California stands out among the states with expensive housing costs. It ranked No. 1 in median home value, at $477,700; No. 2 in monthly housing costs for homeowners, at $1,912; and No. 2 in monthly costs for renters, at $973.

Nearly half of California homeowners – 48 percent – spent more than 30 percent of their incomes on housing last year. Among America's 15 largest cities, San Francisco had the most expensive homes, with a median value of $726,700. Detroit had the least expensive at $88,300

Steve Laevastu & Roger Turner are your EXCLUSIVE Ravenna Realtors

Here is what our clients have to say.....

September 6th, 2006

Dear Windermere, Prospective Buyers and Sellers;

This year our family was faced with a job-related move. Just a couple of years earlier, we had found the perfect house with the help of Steve Laevastu. Steve had also helped us sell our home at the time. We were very pleased with our first experience and decided to call Steve again.

In both of our experiences with Steve, we were grateful for his excellence in marketing our home, representing us in negotiations and managing the many steps toward closing. Steve was always available, patient and enthusiastic. Moving a family is a stressful experience even if everything goes perfectly. Steve inspired confidence so that we could focus on packing, researching neighborhoods and finding schools.

We would certainly ask Steve to help us again with any real estate in the Seattle area. We would not hesitate to recommend him to family or friends.

Sincerely,

David Pereles.

Mr Roger Turner of Windermere/ Oak Tree Office

I have never written a letter such as this one before but felt the need to express our gratefulness to you for handling the sale of our property on Queen Anne Hill. We have sold quite a lot of properties in our lives but have never met a real estate salesman we felt we could really trust; we even had one forge our signature!!! In this case however, we think that you gave us your all.

It took you five years-- our neighbor was the fly in the ointment. Your persistence and patience prevailed and you made the sale! Your willingness to continue trying in the face of such adversity impressed us as did your kind and gentle manner. Your dedication convinced us that you were truly a fine person with whom to deal.

We have one request and that is to exact a promise from you that you will remain as trustworthy, helpful, low-pressure and agreeable as you have been when working with us. Just remain the person you are now. Don't let those fast talking, high pressure salespeople with whom you undoubtedly come in contact every day influence you. You are just fine as you are.

Most Sincerely,

Dottie & Jim Anderson

Mayor Announces Police Crime Stats

Seattle Mayor Greg Nickels announced yesterday that police crime data sorted by neighborhood is now available on the city's Web site. Statistics on vehicle thefts, property crimes, residential burglaries, violent crimes, plus an overview of major crimes citywide, are mapped on "My Neighborhood" by census tract.

"Keeping our neighborhoods safe includes giving people the tools they need to understand how the Police Department responds to crime," said Nickels. "Seattle is ahead of other U.S. cities in providing critical information in such an easy-to-use format, and we will be adding even more neighborhood-based statistics in the months ahead."

The "My Neighborhood" mapping project, created by the city's Department of Information Technology, received the 2006 Excellence Award in Strategic Innovation for Large Population Groups by the National Association of Government Webmasters (NAGW) this past week in Reno, Nevada. NAGW is the first organization for local and regional government Web professionals. The award follows on the heels of Seattle.gov being named the best city Web portal in the country in August.

"My Neighborhood" was launched in March 2006 and now has 30 city services residents and visitors can view on neighborhood-based maps. The site offers a way for the public to locate the closest public facilities, such as tennis courts, libraries, farmers markets, and fire hydrants; and to see how close they are to their home or business. Future additions to "My Neighborhood" include details on local master use permit applications and neighborhood public art. The site is used more than 8,000 times a week.

Applications Available for Neighborhood and Community Arts Funding

Applications available for Neighborhood and Community Arts Funding Program supports annual community events Seattle, WA - Festivals and events color the character of Seattle's neighborhoods, from the Fremont Solstice Parade to El Dia de los Muertos. The Neighborhood and Community Arts Program supports and encourages the work of Seattle's neighborhood arts councils and community stewardship groups that produce recurring festivals or events that promote arts and cultural participation.

Neighborhood arts councils and community stewardship groups that have been in existence for at least one year may seek annual support for a recurring festival or event occurring in 2007 that has a significant arts and cultural component, is open to the public and takes place in Seattle. "We are determined that all of our arts funding reflect the breadth and depth of Seattle, from all communities and viewpoints," said Mayor Greg Nickels. "The success of our Neighborhood and Community Arts Program, as with all city programs, depends upon inclusion."

Funding of $1,200 per event is provided to support direct project expenses, including artist fees, marketing and promotional fees, venue and equipment rentals or other production-related expenses. Funds may not be used for fund-raising or organizational administrative expenses.

The Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs promotes the value of arts and culture in and of communities throughout Seattle. The 15-member Seattle Arts Commission, citizen volunteers appointed by the Mayor and City Council, supports the city agency.

Applications are available at <http://www.seattle.gov/arts> (select Funding Applications.) The application deadline is 5 p.m., Monday, Oct. 30. Postmarks will not be accepted. Those unable to download the online application may contact Michelle Blackmon at 206-733-9576 or michelle.blackmon@seattle.gov.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, home values across the United States soared 32 percent during the first half of this decade. Among U.S. cities, the largest increase was in San Diego, where the real median home value surged by 127.2 percent, a jump to $567,000 from $249,000 from 2000 to 2005.
